INTRODUCTION

A MONG THE COOKBOOKS ON THE PANTRY SHELF AT HOME THERE HAS always been the little hand-written notebook of recipes. As a child I learned that this blue notebook, which contained a collection of my mother's favorite recipes, was her favorite cookbook.

Not only were all the pages of this notebook filled with recipes, but inserted between the pages were loose sheets of paper on which were written other favorites. These were copied by friends and relatives whom Mother had visited at some time and whose specialty she had admired. The recipes were usually named for the donor and thus the book contained many queer names, such as "Grandmother's Ginger Cakes" and "Aunt Emma's Fat Cakes."

As a child I occasionally visited my grandmother and an aunt in an adjoining county. They always had such delicious things to eat, and I noticed that they too frequently referred to quaint little hand-written notebooks similar to my mother's.

As a student in high school I took home economics and was delighted to learn of many new and beautifully illustrated cookbooks. The time had come when I felt I had outgrown that old-time notebook; so I pushed it aside while I tried out new recipes.

Then came college days and frequent visits to my roommate's home in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. In the heart of that region, where Pennsylvania Dutch cookery abounds, I suddenly became aware of the fact that hand-written notebooks of recipes were still in use.

My first position after finishing college took me throughout the United States. En route I chanced to visit numerous Mennonite communities. I soon began to observe that wherever I went, to California or Colorado, to Iowa or Ohio, our cooking was much the same. Some of the recipes that my mother had recorded in her little book were being used even in the Far West.

Since a cookbook of the favorite recipes of Mennonite families had never been published, I now began to sense that the handwritten recipe books were responsible. I asked to see them wherever I went and was astonished to learn how many of them had been destroyed in recent years. The daughters of today were guilty of pushing them aside in favor of the new, just as I had done one day. It is true that many of our mothers were still using the old favorite recipes, but were doing so by memory. When I found them, the little notebooks were usually at the bottom of a stack of modern cookbooks and were kept only for memory's sake. Through the years many had become so worn and soiled that in places they were no longer legible.

By now these old books with their recipes had become like cherished pieces of old china, each telling a story of the days when Grandmother was queen of the kitchen. Two factors were responsible for my desire to collect these old recipes and have them published. The first was the realization that in many instances our mothers would be the last generation to use them. The second was the realization, on my own part, of how much I had learned to appreciate many of these fine old recipes. I was challenged with the thought that now is the time to preserve them. So this book is an attempt to preserve for posterity our own peculiar type of cookery that has been handed down for many generations.

In order to make this book more inclusive than it would be if only Grandmother's recipes were recorded, it also includes favorite recipes of our own day. Grandmother recorded no salad recipes or casserole dishes or numerous other dishes that our present appetites call for.

Many of the old recipes came in a form that would not be much help to the modern homemaker. In order to make each recipe usable today, all these have been tested, and ingredients have been measured by standard measuring equipment. Details for procedure in carrying out the recipe have also been added.

Most of the stories recorded in chapter introductions came from my grandmother, known to everyone outside the family as "Aunt Mary." At ninety years of age, she still entertained us with these stories from the good old days.

This collection is a compilation of over 1,100 recipes, chosen from more than 5,000 recipes sent in. They come to you from most of the Mennonite communities in the United States and Canada.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Every possible effort has been made to present to the users of this book recipes that are properly balanced and those which can be easily followed. This fact alone, however, is not enough to assure one success in carrying them out. In order to obtain excellent results and thus give each recipe a chance to prove itself, the following things must be remembered:

1. All measurements are level.
2. There is a wrong and a right way of measuring each ingredient. (Details are given later.)
3. Standard measuring utensils must be used, a cup does not mean a tea or coffee cup. It refers to the standard measuring cup that holds 16 tablespoons.
4. Ingredients must be combined according to procedure given in the recipe. If the recipe states that the cake is to be made by the conventional method, one cannot expect to get the same results by using the quick method of mixing. The proportion of ingredients varies according to the method of mixing used.
5. The technique used in mixing a product is important. If the recipe states that one ingredient be folded into another, good results will not be obtained if these are beaten together.
6. The amount of mixing is important. If a cake is overmixed, the result is a decrease in volume. If undermixed, the texture is breadlike and the walls are coarse and thick.
7. Substitutions should not be made unless these are of such nature that good results can be assured.
8. The size of the baking pan is also important. The most satisfactory tins for layer cakes should be not more than 1 inches deep. Straight-sided pans result in better textures than sloped ones. For fine, velvety texture, the batter should be at least one inch in depth when poured into pan.

9. Correct temperatures must be used. If the oven is too hot, a hard crust forms, which does not allow the batter to rise sufficiently. If this occurs, the inside pressure causes the crust to break and a ridge will result. If too high temperature is used in meat cookery, a great amount of shrinkage results. If too high temperature is used in baking milk and egg products, the finished dish will be watery.
10. When a recipe calls for flour, it means all-purpose flour unless otherwise stated.
11. When a recipe calls for sugar, it means granulated sugar unless otherwise stated.
12. When a recipe calls for shortening, part lard or vegetable shortening may be used for economy and part butter or margarine for flavor.

To Measure Dry Ingredients

Fill the cup or spoon to overflowing, then level it off with a straight-sided knife or spatula. Do not tap or shake cup in leveling, as this tends to pack ingredients. Flour should always be sifted before measuring.

To measure brown sugar, pack it firmly into a cup.

To measure confectioner's or powdered sugar, sift and pile it lightly into a cup.

To Measure Liquids

Use a glass measuring cup on which the 1-cup mark does not come to the top of the cup. Otherwise it will be difficult to pour the liquid from the cup. Keep cup on a flat surface and check contents at eye level. Empty completely.

To Measure Shortenings

If fat is hard, measure it by the water-displacement method. Fill cup with water to the 1-cup level. Then pour out as much water as shortening called for. Add shortening until the cup mark is again reached. If shortening is pliable, press it firmly into spoon or cup in order to remove air spaces. Level off with the straight edge of a knife or spatula.

Breads

Chapter I

BREAD IS THE STAFF OF LIFE," GRANDPA USED TO SAY WHEN HE CAME IN for dinner and smelled Grandma's freshly baked bread. But Grandma must have sometimes wished that baking day would not come so often. She always baked twice each week as regularly as she served three meals a day.

One of the essential pieces of equipment in the old-fashioned kitchen was the dough tray. In this boxy type of cabinet Grandma kept her flour and made up her bread. It was about four feet long and one and a half feet wide and deep. This stood on legs that were a comfortable height for Grandmother. The lid that slipped off was smooth on the underneath side and was used as a dough board.

Each Tuesday and Thursday evening Grandmother brought from the cellar or springhouse the can of liquid yeast that she had saved from the preceding bake day. She mixed into this some salt, sugar and fat and added enough warm water to make a gallon crock full of liquid. She then took the lid off the dough tray and at one end sifted a large amount of flour. Her next step was to make a well in the sifted flour and pour in the liquid. She worked the dough with her hands, adding more flour until she had a smooth, round ball of dough that no longer stuck to her fingers. Then she covered this with a clean cloth, put the lid on the tray, added another log to the fire, and went to bed.

In the morning she was up bright and early. As soon as breakfast had been started, she hurried to the outdoor oven in the back yard and made a fire. While the stones or bricks heated on the inside, she worked "out" the loaves of bread. She usually had twelve to fourteen loaves each baking. When the oven had heated to the correct temperature, she raked all the coals and ashes outside and slipped in the pans of dough.

There are many families who still make all their own bread, but I know of none who continue to use the dough tray and outdoor oven. The dough tray has moved from the lowly corner in the kitchen to a place of distinction in someone's colonial-furnished living room. The outdoor oven, when seen at all, is covered with ivy and kept only for memory's sake.

Grandmother had other favorites that she made for holiday occasions or just to have variety. There was salt rising bread, which many of us still enjoy. It was made by setting a sponge of sliced potatoes, corn meal and hot water. This was allowed to stand overnight, and then flour was added. Cheese rolls, zwieback and Portzelky (yeast fritters) are favorites among the Russian Mennonites. The latter were always made at New Year's time.

Fried corn-meal mush for breakfast or a big dish of cooked mush and milk for supper was a good substitute for bread. Recently I learned a new way of making mush from an old recipe. It said, "Add enough meal and flour to the boiling water until it becomes sufficiently thick to say ‘pouff’ when it cooks!”

YEAST BREADS

Starter for Liquid Yeast

4 medium-sized potatoes

3 pints boiling water

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup sugar

2 teaspoons salt

1 small yeast cake

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup lukewarm water

Pare and slice the potatoes and cook in hot water until soft.

Force potatoes through a ricer or colander and add to potato water.

There should be 1 quart of this mixture.

Add to this the sugar and salt.

When mixture has cooled to lukewarm temperature, add the yeast that has been dissolved in  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup warm water.

Keep at room temperature for 24 hours and then pour into sterilized jars and keep in refrigerator or cool cellar.

To make up bread, use 1 cup of starter in place of 1 compressed yeast cake.

To 3 cups starter add:

3 quarts lukewarm water

1 cup sugar

$\frac{3}{4}$  cup lard

2 tablespoons salt

Before adding flour to make a sponge, remove 3 cups of liquid for next baking.

This may be kept in refrigerator for three weeks.

Basic White Bread Recipe

4 cups scalded milk or
2 cups milk and 2 cups water
2 cakes compressed yeast
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons salt
3 tablespoons shortening
12 cups sifted flour

Dissolve yeast in cup warm water.

Add fat, sugar and salt to scalded milk or boiling water.

Add softened yeast to milk that has cooled to lukewarm temperature.

Add flour gradually, making a dough stiff enough so that it can be easily handled.

Knead dough quickly and lightly until it is smooth and elastic.

Place in greased bowl, cover and set in a warm place to rise.

Let rise until double in bulk (about 2 hours).

Shape into loaves, brush with melted fat and allow to rise again until double in bulk.

Bake at 350-375° for approximately 1 hour or at 425° for 15 minutes and then reduce to 375° for 30 minutes.

When done, bread will shrink from the sides of the pan and should have a hollow sound when tapped.

When baked, remove bread from pans.

Do not cover while cooling if a crusty bread is desired.

Makes 3 large or 4 medium loaves.

MRS. PAUL GODSHALL, Harleysville, Pa.; MRS. AARON STAUFFER,

5 tablespoons sugar
5-6 cups flour

1½ teaspoons salt
¼ cup shortening
1 yeast cake softened in ½ cup warm water

Scald the milk and add shortening and sugar.

When liquid is cooled to lukewarm temperature, add yeast that has been dissolved in ½ cup lukewarm water.

Add 3 cups of flour and beat thoroughly.

Set sponge in a warm place for 30 minutes, or until light.

Beat egg and salt and add to sponge along with the remaining flour.

Knead until dough no longer sticks to the board or fingers.

When dough is light, cut into small pieces and shape into rolls.

Brush with fat and let rise until light.

Bake at 400-425° until a golden brown (15 to 20 minutes).

Makes approximately 2 dozen medium-sized rolls.

MRS. JOHN W. GINGERICH, Wellman, Iowa

“Bubbat”

A Favorite of the Russian Mennonites

1 yeast cake
1 egg
1½ cups milk
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
1 pound smoked sausage
Flour enough to make stiff dough (approximately 3½-4 cups)

Scald milk and then cool it to lukewarm temperature.

Add dissolved yeast and sugar.

Then add beaten egg, salt and enough flour to make a soft dough that can barely be stirred with a spoon.

Let dough rise and then pour into a greased pan  $10 \times 14 \times 2$  inches.
Into this press 3 inch lengths of sausage at 3 inch intervals.
Let rise again; the dough will almost cover sausages.
Bake at 375-400° for approximately 45 minutes.
Serve hot.
Serves 6-8.

Soups

Chapter II

GONE WITH THE YEARS IS THAT OLD SOUP KETTLE THAT ALWAYS STOOD on the back of the stove. It was no problem to Grandma to know what to do with the liquid in which vegetables had cooked, for in that soup pot she placed all her meat scraps and vegetable broths. She did not serve soup every day, but when she needed it to fill out a meal that was a little more lean than usual, she was prepared.

As soon as you mention soup to the Pennsylvania Dutchman he immediately smacks his lips with the thought of chicken corn soup. To those of Russian background nothing is more delicious, in the way of soups, than borsch. This is a type of vegetable soup to which sour cream is added just before serving. Another soup that is a universal favorite among our people is bean soup, seasoned with ham bone or salt pork. This is delicious, as someone suggested, when served with green garden onions.

Besides soups containing meat stock, there are numerous types of milk and cream soups thickened with rivels (tiny balls of dough no larger than a cherry stone) or cubes of toasted bread. Equally as good as the bean soup cooked with meat is the one prepared by adding rich milk, butter and slices of toasted bread to the beans before serving. A favorite of my grandmother was her milk and rivel soup. It was one of her few dishes I never learned to appreciate. There was another in the same category, which she called "Pap." This was made by adding sugar and flour paste to hot milk, and it had the reputation of being able to get anyone on his feet after any kind of illness!

"Chilly Day Soup" had just the right name, for it touched the spot on those chilly days during the "sheep rains," or on dreary days in fall and winter. The old recipe says to "add four chopped onions to a kettle half full of water, then add diced potatoes, cabbage," etc. It is a vegetable soup without a meat stock.

There is yet another type of soup made in some Mennonite communities and known as "Cold Soup" or "Farmer's Summer Supper Dish." It is made by adding crushed fruit or berries to cold milk. This is then poured over a dish of broken-up bread and allowed to stand until all the milk is absorbed. In this same class of soaked bread soups is the very old "Vinegar Soup" or "Black Strap," which was popular in eastern Pennsylvania during the early days. The fact that these have not survived to any extent is proof enough that they are no longer considered palatable.

Meats
and Meat Dishes
Chapter III

SINCE MUCH OF THE MEAT THAT THE FARMER BUTCHERS TODAY FINDS its way to the freezing locker, there is little need of a special storehouse for meat, but go with me for a peep into Great-grandfather's old smokehouse.

It is late December, and butchering day has passed. In a large wooden barrel in one corner are many pieces of meat placed in criss-cross fashion, so that the air can circulate around them as the sugar cure is absorbed. Other pieces are suspended from the rafters by heavy twine, these having just been removed from the barrel. As we count the pieces of meat, we find there are 12 hams, 12 shoulders and 12 slabs of bacon, known as “middlings” by Grandmother. Thus we know that six hogs were butchered to meet the needs of a large family of growing children.

One smells the faint odor of wood chips. No doubt it was hickory that smoldered in a small iron pot in the corner so as to improve the flavor of the meat.

Along one side of the wall there are shelves filled with rows of gallon crocks. Each one of these is neatly covered across the top with brown paper and tied with a string. As you walk nearer you see written plainly on each one, “Sausage” or “Liver Pudding.”

In addition to all this pork meat, Grandfather butchered a beef on shares with a neighbor sometime during the winter. It was necessary to have beef in order to make summer sausage (bologna) and jerks (home-cured dried beef). With such a bountiful supply of meat, it is no wonder that Grandmother’s menu could include scrapple for breakfast, meat potpie for dinner, and fried ham for supper. The people who lived in houses that were inadequately heated, and who were up doing chores before the peep of dawn, required a heavier diet than we need today.

Most typical of our meat dishes today are the beef and chicken potpie, ponhaus and scrapple, pickled pigs’ feet (souse) and roast pig stomach (Dutch goose). And one must not forget the schnitz un knepp. If it is prepared by cooking a ham bone and then adding the dried apple snitz, we may list it with the meat dishes. Family appetites differ, however, on how this old-fashioned favorite should be prepared. Many prefer only the flavor of the fruit and dumplings and do not use meat.

The smokehouse, like the old log house built over the spring, is numbered and found wanting among the buildings on the up-to-date farm today. “Time changes things,” the poet says, and how true are his words!

Chapter IV

IN OUR GRANDMOTHER'S DAY IT WAS MORE ESSENTIAL THAT THE HOUSE and farm buildings be located near a spring than along a good road. For that reason, many of the older houses were approached by a long, narrow lane. When Grandmother chanced to look out her kitchen window around 9:30 in the morning to see a buggy coming up the lane, she made a hasty conclusion: company for dinner!

It seemed she was always prepared for such an occasion. In the chicken yard she kept several hens in a coop in order to fatten them for company dinners. As she hurried there, she repeated something she used to hear her mother say, "Roasted pigeons do not fly into one's mouth." By the time the guests had driven into the yard and hitched the horse, Grandmother was coming in with her decapitated hen. "I am so glad you folks came today," she called happily, "you see what we are having for dinner." Of course, there was always the smokehouse with its supply of cured pork to fall back on, but even ham was everyday fare in Grandmother's day. She seldom served it alone for company dinners without some apologies.

Besides roast chicken, Grandmother's specialties were chicken and dumplings, and chicken and oyster pie. There was pigeon potpie too, which Grandmother made when the boys of the family shot down a pigeon or two now and then. For variety, she had a brood of ducks or geese; these were more difficult to raise, so she aimed only to have enough for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner.

A story handed down gives interesting information regarding the various names used for bread dressing used to stuff fowls. There was a large table of guests, and Uncle Dave, who was visiting from an adjoining state, was asked to pass the "dressing." Seeing only a look of dismay on his face, the host tried again, asking him to pass the "filling." Still not getting anywhere he suggested that he pass the "stuffing." "Oh," exclaimed Uncle Dave at last, "we call that ramming!"

The many types of canned fish that stand on our shelves today were unknown to Grandmother. Instead of the fish dishes we enjoy, she served mainly fried, fresh fish. The streams in her day had an abundant supply of fresh-water fish. To these streams Great-grandfather took his boys fishing at the close of harvest and haymaking. They had helped faithfully in the fields and this annual treat was one of their rewards. They usually went to a nearby river or creek in the evening, and there fished until they had caught enough to satisfy their appetites. Great-grandmother sat by the oil lamp quilting until they returned, so she could clean the fish. What a delicious breakfast the family enjoyed next morning! Fresh trout rolled in corn meal and fried in fat, along with plenty of fresh bread and butter!

Roast Chicken

4½ pound hen

1 tablespoon salt

1½ teaspoons ginger

Bread dressing (see pages 101, 102)

Rub inside of chicken with the mixture of salt and ginger (use 1½ teaspoons salt for inside of fowl).

Stuff with favorite bread dressing recipe.

Lay a bread crust over dressing before trussing to keep it from coming out as the chicken roasts.

Rub outside of chicken with melted butter and sprinkle with remaining salt, to which 1 tablespoon of flour has been added, or cover fowl with a cloth dipped in melted fat.

Place in a roasting pan and add ½ cup water. Do not cover.

For first part of roasting period, place bird with the breast side down on a rack in a roasting pan.

In this position the thighs will cook more thoroughly without over-cooking the breast.

Roast at 350°, allowing 30 minutes per pound.

Turn the bird with the breast side up during the latter part of the roasting period.

If a soft rather than a crisp skin is preferred, cover the roasting pan for the last 30 minutes of roasting.

To test whether the bird is done, insert a sharp fork into the thickest part of the breast or thigh.

When done, the fork can be turned easily in the meat and the juice that runs out will show no trace of red.

If a cloth is not used to cover the fowl, it must be basted with hot drippings every 20 to 25 minutes.

Place bird on platter and remove strings and skewers used for trussing.
Makes 8-10 servings.
Serve with gilet gravy.

Cheese, Egg and Casserole Dishes

Chapter IV

BECAUSE OF OUR SWISS, GERMAN AND DUTCH ANCESTRY, IT IS EASY TO understand the reason for our fondness for many kinds of cheese. Some of the most typical of these recipes, no doubt brought from Europe, are cup cheese, egg cheese, soda cheese and stink cheese. Grandmother made each of them often enough to tell by the touch of her experienced fingers how much to scald the sour milk. She also knew when the curd had aged sufficiently to bring out the desired flavor of each type. That limb on the plum tree outside her kitchen window was a testimony to her many cheese makings. It was worn at the place where she always tied the bag of scalded curd to drain!

Grandmother traveled the path between her cook stove and egg basket rather frequently. Besides the numerous desserts which she prepared, all of those potpie, dumpling and noodle doughs called for eggs. It was no easy task to plan so that she would have enough eggs for cooking, and at the same time, have a basketful to exchange for groceries at the country store.

It was most interesting to see Grandmother making noodles. She did not even dream that the day would come when one could go to a store and buy noodles. She would never have been caught buying them, however, had it been possible—not Grandma! What machine could make as delicious noodles as she could! When she made noodles, she was never stingy with eggs, because she wanted them to be a deep yellow. Into a large bowl she would sift flour and salt. She would make a well in the flour and break eggs, one at a time, mixing with her fingers as she worked. When the dough was smooth and very stiff, she would divide it into equal parts and roll it into round balls the size of a large apple. These balls she would roll into a perfect round of dough 12 to 15 inches in diameter. They were as thin as she could possibly roll them.

Her next move was one of her own inventions. She had learned that these rounds of dough would dry quickly if she placed them in the sun. So she put one of her checkered tablecloths over the clothesline wire and hung the pieces of dough over the wire. She turned them numerous times during the drying process. Often there were 10 or 12 large pieces. When they had reached the stage of drying just before they would get hard enough to break, she removed them to the kitchen. There she rolled 3 or 4 pieces together as we roll a jelly roll. With a sharp knife she sliced across the roll, making fine strips. After they were all sliced, she let them dry until her meat was done and the broth was ready. She added some chopped parsley just before serving this favorite dish of the family.

Grandmother always had a half-dozen guineas around; these she kept for two reasons. They were her alarm clock in the morning as they called “pot rack, pot rack,” and their eggs were considered far superior to chicken eggs as far as flavor was concerned. When she was to travel on the train, or ride a long distance by buggy, Grandmother never packed a lunch that did not contain hard-cooked guinea eggs. Because the shells were very hard, she cooked them about an hour before she was satisfied that they were done. At noon she took them from her bag and dipped the end in salt, which she had wrapped in a piece of brown paper. That egg eaten with buttered bread was as delicious to Grandmother as any fancy concoction we can spread in a sandwich today!

Drain through a fine colander or cloth sack. Let stand overnight to drain thoroughly.

Place in a crock and crumble until fine. Add the salt and mix well.

Cover with a cloth and set to ripen at room temperature for 3 days.

Mix soda in the cheese and let stand 3 hours.

Melt butter in an aluminum pan or skillet and add the cheese.

Crumble curds or grind them fine in a food chopper.

Mix soda through cheese and place it in a crock.

Cover with a cloth and allow to stand 3 days at room temperature.

Stir each morning and evening.

At the end of the third day the cheese should appear yellow and gummy, and have a sharp odor.

Set crock containing cheese in a boiler of hot water.

Add salt and water and stir until smooth.

Pour into custard cups. When cold it can be spread on bread.

Add the caraway seed, salt and enough cream to make the mixture stick together in balls the size of an egg.

Place cheese balls on a board in a dry place and allow to dry.

Turn each day for first few days in order to permit a crust to form on all

Vegetables and Vegetable Dishes

Chapter VI

WHEN IT CAME TO HAVING A BIG ENOUGH GARDEN, GRANDFATHER always had plenty of land. "Them that works hard, eats hearty," he used to say. If the vegetable garden near the house became too hemmed in by farm buildings that were enlarged as the needs of his growing family increased, he had a solution. It was easy enough to sacrifice an acre strip of ground from one of the fields nearest the house. When he had fenced in this land, he had a "vegetable patch."

Long rows of potatoes, corn, and green beans were planted in this so-called patch. There were also rows of pole butter beans. At each hill a tall pole was planted for the vines to trail on. Four of these poles were tied together near the top in wigwam fashion. There were also pumpkin vines, which wrapped themselves around the stalks of corn and produced big orange pumpkins in autumn. And there was always a cucumber bed to help meet the need for "the seven sours." When the soil was sandy enough, there were also beds of muskmelons and watermelons.

Onions, radishes, lettuce, peas and cabbage were planted in the garden, where it was handy for Grandmother to gather them in preparation for a meal. There were also tomatoes and parsnips and a bed of greens, mustard or turnip tops being the favorites.

The growing children of the family usually were assigned the task of keeping the patch clean. Nancy and Rebecca never minded this when it meant being relieved of washing the supper dishes in the cool of the day. But oh, how they hated that patch on a hot afternoon in mid-July! As they went down those long rows pulling weeds, or picking off potato bugs, one could have heard them frequently bemoaning the fact that they were farmer's daughters.

Grandmother had her own way of cooking vegetables. She scalded her cabbage and greens by pouring boiling water over them and allowing them to stand in it several minutes. Thus she removed some of the strong flavor and "got rid of impurities." The slightly colored water was then discarded and the vegetables were cooked from nine o'clock until noon! If beans were on the menu, the "speck," or salt pork, was put on to boil first thing after breakfast and the beans added shortly afterwards.

We know very little about Grandmother's special vegetable dishes, as she, like homemakers today, seldom cooked vegetables by a recipe. During those winters before much canning was done, the principal stand-bys were potatoes, dried vegetables and fermented foods like kraut. Among the dried foods, corn and green beans, known as "hay beans" to Grandmother, were most popular. After a preliminary cooking, they were spread on a cloth and dried in the sun on the porch roof. It was not unusual for Grandmother to have a hundred-pound sugar bag filled with dried hay beans, shelled beans or corn.

Salads and Salad Dressings

Chapter VII.

SALADS ARE NOT LISTED AMONG THE RECIPES FOUND IN GRANDMOTHER'S old-fashioned cookbook. This fact is not too surprising, since the idea of having a salad with every dinner is a twentieth-century innovation.

It should be noted, however, that many of the foods we use in salads were a part of the diet of our great-grandparents. Those dishes of former days, although not called salads, consisted of lettuce, onions and radishes in late spring; cole slaw during the summer; endive, turnip slaw, and celery during crisp autumn days; and dandelion and water cress in early spring. In the absence of beautiful salad plates, these were served in fancy glass dishes, and were just another of the tasty foods arranged on Grandmother's table.

In winter the old wooden cabbage barrel, buried beneath the ground, provided slaw as long as the supply lasted. When it had been emptied, there was found a good substitute for salads in the row of pickles and relishes on the shelf in the cellar. Grandmother had made cucumber, beet, and green tomato pickle on those days before the first frost came to wilt her garden. These served to whet the appetites of her family members until spring came.

Most interesting is this bit of helpful advice found written among a list of home remedies in a quaint old recipe book: "At this season of the year [spring] too much cannot be said in favor of onions. Whether raw or cooked they are especially good, both medicinally and as a skin beautifier."

Salads have become so popular during the last few decades that we find almost every type of food being used in our newest recipes. We not only use vegetables and fruits, but we mix these together with a host of other foods in a way that would have horrified Grandmother!

One soon learns that she need not always follow a recipe in making a salad, but that she can be creative.

Cakes and Frostings

Chapter VIII

DURING MY ROUNDS OF COLLECTING RECIPES I HAVE STUDIED A LARGE number of old handwritten notebooks that bear dates prior to the Civil War. As a result of this study, I have concluded that cake recipes held first place of importance to Grandmother. These cake recipes were not only the first ones recorded in her book but they occupied the greatest number of pages. This may be due to the fact that Grandmother recorded only those recipes which she did not use frequently enough to learn by memory.

Although there are numerous old cake recipes to be found, few of them are of any benefit to the ambitious young cake baker today. This is due to the fact that Grandmother took it for granted that anyone who could cook would know how to proceed without directions. She listed only the ingredients required without ever stating the procedure to follow. We can only guess if the recipe was meant for a loaf cake, a layer cake or a cookie.

Another characteristic regarding the earliest cake recipes is that many even failed to list flour among the essential ingredients. Again it must have been assumed that anyone would know to add enough flour to make a batter "just the right consistency."

When measurements for ingredients were given, they were usually of such nature that they are not meaningful today. One very old recipe calls for "two tins of flour and the third tin to the second ring." That may have meant a pint cup or a quart cup, or perhaps it referred to a special cup that is unknown to us at the present time. Another recipe called for a sixpenny crock of liquid and the third stated leavening in terms of five-cents worth of baking ammonia.

From a bride's book of 1844 comes a molasses cake recipe that calls for 10 "blubs" of molasses. This would indicate that the molasses was kept in a barrel and so much came out with each blub!

In Great-grandfather's day folks drove by horse and wagon 150 miles to Richmond, Virginia, once a year for sugar and other supplies. Thus we can understand why sugar was not plentiful enough to make fluffy frostings and decorate cakes as we do. Grandmother's two favorite "company cakes" were the rich pound cake that required no frosting, and the four-layered ribbon cake. Each of these layers was a different color: white, pink, yellow, and spice or chocolate. These layers were spread with bright currant jam and stacked one on top of another. From its lofty perch on the high cake stand this was a cake fit for a king!

The cake recipes in this chapter have been selected from approximately 600 recipes.

All have been tested in the laboratory and have been selected because they rated a high score.

Cookies

Chapter IX

COOKIES WERE KNOWN TO GREAT-AUNT BARBARA ONLY AS "CAKES." Her two favorites were the old-fashioned ginger cookie, known also as leb kuchen, and the rich type of sugar cookie. The ginger cookie, still a favorite among our people, is a thick, chewy cookie always brushed with beaten egg to glaze it. The sugar cookie was usually made with sour cream and soda and then sprinkled with a mixture of sugar and cinnamon before it was baked.

Recently, during one of my rounds of collecting old recipes, I visited a dear 94-year-old granny. I had been told that she had made a name for herself during her younger days as the maker of the most delicious leb kuchen in her community. As I sat down and began to ask questions she only said, "I have not cooked for more than 15 years, and I have forgotten how I used to do things." Then I attempted once more to draw her out by telling her what I had heard about her ginger "cakes." Her eyes lost that faded look and with a gleam akin to youthful excitement she said, "Ginger cakes; oh, I have made many a one!" As she reminisced, she spoke of the days when she made a whole tub full of dough at a time and carried it to the springhouse to cool overnight. Her recipe was the typical one of her day, "Take just enough flour so that the dough will roll easily. You dare not take too much or the cookies will be dry and will stale readily."

A young homemaker from Ontario, Canada, wrote me an interesting story regarding an old ginger cookie recipe handed down by a great-aunt. "One day when I was still a small girl in school my Great-Aunt Esther called and asked me to come to visit her. She was getting old and had no children, so she wished to pass on several recipes that she had brought by memory from Europe. She had been taught only German and had never learned to write the English language. I drove five miles with the horse and buggy, and we baked all afternoon. She called these cookies 'ginger snaps,' but they did not snap. Instead, they are more like the old-fashioned chewy ginger cakes."

Another interesting story was sent in with a very old recipe called "ginger nuts." It is as follows: "These are small, round cookies which are so hard you have to suck them. My grandmother made them often and carried them to church hidden in a pocket in the folds of her skirt. She would use them, as needed, during church service to quiet and amuse her grandchildren."

There are other fascinating stories about cakes fried in deep fat and known in Grandmother's day as knee patches, plow lines and fasnachts. Peppernuts (pfeffernusse) and snicker doodles are two of the older recipes still popular enough to be worthy of a place in this book.

Desserts

Chapter X

I SOMETIMES BELIEVE THAT GREAT-GRANDMA ROCKED HER BABIES TO SLEEP with tunes other than the well-known lullaby, "Rockabye Baby." One of these must have been "seven sweets and seven sours," for every young lady grew up believing that no dinner was complete without its seven sweets and seven sours.

Several years ago I visited a friend who lived in the heart of that region where Pennsylvania Dutch cookery is well known. There was only one thing she did not know about cooking: that was when she had enough! Her guests had eaten heartily of the main dinner, and then began the merry-go-round of desserts. Hesitating as I tried to select one of the four or five desserts passed, I said, "My dear, you expect too much of your guests." She looked surprised for a moment, as if she did not understand, and then in self-defense said, "Ach, well, peaches aren't a dessert; they are just fruit. And rice pudding I will not call a dessert either. It is just another dish, and certainly any good cook would have pie and cake with company dinner."

Besides the cakes and pies, the popular desserts of yesteryears consisted of baked puddings and old-fashioned custards. Not uncommon were steamed suet puddings, bread pudding, cherry dumplings, apple roll, short cakes and fruit custards.

The fondness of our ancestors for the heavier type of foods induced them to serve dumplings as a dessert as well as a main dish. There are still to be found numerous kinds and sizes of dumplings made according to family tastes. The old-time dampf knepp, made by dropping big balls of yeast dough onto hot fruit to steam is most delicious. There are the smaller dumplings such as cherry dumplings, which are made by dropping a baking powder leavened dough from a spoon. In mentioning these rich fruit desserts one must not forget "Pluma Moos," the favorite of many Mennonites of Russian background. This is made by cooking together a number of dried fruits, and thickening them with a flour paste to which a cup of sweet cream is added.

Although Grandma did not grace her table with lighted candles and bouquets of flowers, she nevertheless laid a beautiful table. There was always quite a display of color in the large variety of desserts. There were decorative notes, too, in the cut glass, or beautifully painted cream pitcher and sugar bowl, which accompanied even the richest of desserts. Near the center of the table stood the tall glass cake stand, which was polished until it sparkled before Grandma placed on it the golden pound cake.

What could make a prettier picture than a dish of spiced crab apples? Those dainty butter molds added touches of color too. It seemed each granny tried to outdo her neighbor by displaying the most unusual one. My own grandmother's favorite was a work of art and patience. She curled the edges of a round ball of butter with a screw, pushing outward and down, to form a perfectly shaped pineapple.

Pastry, Pies and Tarts

Chapter XI

I HAVE ONLY a FAINT RECOLLECTION OF THE PIE SHELF HANGING IN Grandmother's springhouse. This shelf was suspended by wires attached to heavy joists in the ceiling. Although that shelf has always been empty in my time, it has spoken of days past when Grandmother was young and kept her larder full of goodies. On pie-baking day, which was usually Saturday morning, that swinging shelf fairly groaned with the weight of 16 to 18 pies. No wonder the hostess of long ago need not know ahead of time that guests were coming! She was always prepared!

The old-fashioned "safe" followed the shelf in the springhouse as an excellent storage place for pies. It was a cupboard much like any other set of shelves, except that the doors were made of tin. These were beautifully decorated with designs that looked as if they were made with a hammer and nail. These holes, although small enough that no fly could pass through, aided in ventilation.

Some of the favorite pies of those days are still favorites in Mennonite families today. A number of these are not to be found in modern cookbooks, however. Although we have no way of tracing their history, we are convinced that some of these recipes were brought by memory from the old country. Among the most popular ones are the crumb pies and open-faced sour cream fruit pies, including apple, peach and raisin. There are other types of crumb pies with a chewy layer underneath. Two more favorites are the buttermilk custard and the green tomato pies.

I can still recall how as a child I sat and watched my grandmother make pies. She kept a blue-and-white-spotted enamel container in the flour bin, and in that she always made her pastry. She would sift a large amount of flour in this and then add lard for shortening. She never thought of measuring her ingredients, for her experienced fingers knew just when she had enough fat or liquid. And what did it matter anyway, if she added a bit too much fat? She would just add a little more flour and thus have dough enough to make an extra "half-moon turnover" for the grandchildren. Her pastry was not quite so rich as ours today: thus she could work quickly, for it was more easily handled. As I remember those pies, however, they were certainly good.

Grandmother's troubles were not over when she had taken the last pie from the oven. Many of the old brick and stone houses, some of which are still to be found in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and Rockingham County, Virginia, had a back and a front stairway to the second floor. The back steps led to rooms above the kitchen and were occupied as bedrooms by the growing boys of the family. There was no connection between those rooms and the ones in the front of the house on the second floor, where the parents and the girls of the family had their rooms. When the house was quiet and all the family supposedly were asleep, what a temptation it was for Henry, Daniel, Jonas, and Abe to slip down the back stairs and relieve the pie shelf of one or more of its number.

PIES

Pastry (for a 9-inch double-crust pie)

2 $\frac{1}{4}$  cups flour
 $\frac{2}{3}$  cup shortening
 $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon salt
 $\frac{1}{3}$  cup cold water

Combine flour and salt in a mixing bowl.

Cut shortening into flour with a pastry blender or two knives.

Do not overmix; these are sufficiently blended when particles are the size of peas.

Add water gradually, sprinkling 1 tablespoon at a time over mixture.

Toss lightly with a fork until all particles of flour have been dampened.

Use only enough water to hold the pastry together when it is pressed between the fingers. It should not feel wet.

Roll dough into a round ball, handling as little as possible.

Roll out on a lightly floured board into a circle  $\frac{1}{8}$  inch thick and 1 inch larger than the diameter of the top of the pan.

To Make Pastry Shell

Roll dough as in preceding recipe.

Fit circle into a pie plate and trim edges with scissors or a sharp knife. Let  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch extend over rim.

Turn edge under and flute with fingers to make a standing rim.

Prick shell all over with a fork to prevent air bubbles.

Bake at 450° for 12 to 15 minutes or until a golden brown.

Two-Crust Pies

Use pastry recipe on preceding page.

Divide dough into 2 equal portions.

Roll bottom crust as in preceding recipe.

Roll remaining dough for top crust. Decorate top with favorite design, leaving sufficient holes to allow steam to escape during cooking.

Moisten edges of lower crust with cold water. Add top crust.

Press edges together tightly with tines of a fork or with fingers.

Bake as directed in recipe.

Beverages

Chapter XII

ON HOT SUMMER DAYS DURING BARLEY AND WHEAT HARVEST, Grandmother, in the absence of a thermos jug, would fill a kettle with a tight-fitting cover with cold mint tea. Little Peter, who was yet too young to help in the field, would run sometimes a half-mile to the back of the farm, in order that the drink would reach the thirsty harvesters before it should become warm.

Grandmother had her own way of serving a cool drink without using ice cubes from the electric refrigerator. The cool waters dipped from the depths of the spring or drawn by rope and bucket from the hand-dug well were always refreshing.

Favorite drinks of long ago were made from the teas that grew in beds along the fence of the old-fashioned garden. Among these were sage, catnip, hoarhound, horse mint, thyme and peppermint. That early family, which for the most part was a self-sustaining one, produced enough of these herbs for drinking and medicinal purposes.

Besides the many teas that grew in the garden or along the little stream that flowed from the spring, there were other possibilities for beverages. At the lower end of this old garden, numerous grapevines trailed along the fence or were supported by a frame. These yielded a variety of luscious grapes in early autumn. The smallest of these grapes were picked from the bunches and prepared by numerous methods as a tasty drink. This grape juice was stored in large stone jars and kept in the cellar to be used as desired.

The blackberry cordial often spoken of by great-grandmother was sometimes used as a beverage but more often taken for its medicinal properties. Blackberries of that day were not the cultivated varieties we have today. Instead, they were to be found growing wild on the hills and in the woods. When they ripened in July, it was not unusual that the whole family spend an entire day berrying.

There was nothing that "hit the spot" so well as a tin of cold pennyroyal tea or grape juice after one had been piling hay or tying sheaves of grain for half a day. Grandmother knew this; so on these busy days when the men of her family worked from sunup until long after sundown she often planned a party. She worked all afternoon preparing a delicious repast to take to the field for supper. When it was ready, she hitched the horse to the buggy and drove to the field. She selected a tree nearest to where the men were working, and there in its shade she spread a red and white checkered cloth. On it she lay a feast of cold roast ham, freshly baked bread and apple butter, cup cheese, fruit, shoo fly pie, ginger cakes and gallons of mint tea. While the men ate, she kept away the flies by shaking an old-time fly brush made by sewing strips of paper on a hollow stick. What a shame there was never an artist among them to paint for us this picture of bygone days!

1. Measure water and coffee for good results each time.
2. The recommended proportion is 2 tablespoons coffee to each  $\frac{3}{4}$  to 1 standard measuring cup.
3. To make 6 servings, use  $\frac{1}{2}$  to  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup coffee to  $4\frac{1}{2}$  cups water.
4. Make coffee just before it is to be served.
5. Serve only freshly made coffee, as reheated coffee has a flat taste.
6. Keep coffee pot absolutely clean.

Iced Coffee

Make coffee double strength and pour the hot coffee over plenty of ice in tall glasses.

As the ice melts, it will dilute the coffee.

Top the glass with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

Eggnog

4 eggs
4 cups milk
4 tablespoons lemon juice or diluted vinegar
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup cream

MRS. SAMUEL S. SHANK, Broadway, Va.

Tea

To make good tea, carry out the following rules:

1. Use freshly drawn water brought to a bubbling boil.
Water that has boiled for some time has a flat taste.
2. Use an earthenware or nonmetal container for steeping the tea.
Metal alters the flavor of the tea.
3. The teapot should be heated by allowing boiling water to stand in it several minutes before making the tea.
4. Allow 1 teaspoon tea leaves to each cup of water plus “one for the pot.”
5. Pour boiling water over tea and allow to steep 3 to 5 minutes.
Never allow tea to boil.
To allow leaves to remain in tea too long develops a bitter flavor.

Pickles and Relishes

Chapter XIII

A KIND LADY ONCE SAID TO "TILLIE THE MENNONITE MAID," "MY DEAR, don't you know that you should not eat so many pickles. Vinegar is not good for you; it will drain all the color from your cheeks." Tillie retorted somewhat saucily, so the story goes, "Who wants pink cheeks at the expense of pickles?" After all, Grandmother lived to be ninety, she thought, and she never missed a dinner without the proverbial "seven sours."

Our great-grandmothers' love for the sour things induced them to pickle about everything imaginable. Who still does not enjoy little seckel pears pickled whole, as Grandmother prepared them, with the stems attached? The spiced peaches, crab apples, sour cherries or grapes still taste delicious too. Then there are the long strips of watermelon rind and the yellow strips of spiced cantaloupe that are delicious accompaniments to any dinner.

Besides all the fruits, there were a host of vegetables that Grandmother pickled. One interesting old "receipt" book has a recipe for "Pickled Lily." This no doubt refers to piccalilli, having been spelled as granny thought the name sounded. Green tomato pickle in all its various forms was a favorite of the olden times. There was the type made by cooking slices of the vegetable in sweet vinegar solution. Another variety of this green tomato pickle called for raisins, and still another apples. Our own family favorite, known as "granddaddy's green tomato pickle," was still another type. This was made by placing in a crock alternate layers of raw sliced tomatoes and sliced onions. Salt and spices were added generously, and then a plate and heavy weight were placed on top. After several days the juice was drained off and vinegar and sugar added. It is a crisp, uncooked pickle, which my father still asks for each fall when the last of the green tomatoes are gathered. Beet pickle was and still is a favorite of many families. Another recipe sent in by a number of contributors and called "my mother's favorite pickle," is a relish made of shredded beets and cabbage.

Great-grandfather never allowed any of his brood to leave food on their plates at the table. Even the fat meat or "speck" had to be eaten. Great-grandma once more rallied to the need of filling her place as a "helpmeet," this time for her children. She made all kinds of sauces and relishes to pour over that fat meat, and thus helped it to slide down easily! Tomato and gooseberry catsup and chili sauce were favorites. In spring she had another sauce. She walked along the streams or old rail fence and dug roots from the horse-radish plant. These roots she grated and to them added salt and vinegar.

Great-grandma shall long be remembered, not only for her ability to get things done but for her ingenuity in finding the wherewithal to do them.

Jellies, Jams, Preserves

Chapter XIV.

MY GRANDMOTHER'S JELLY CUPBOARD WAS AS PICTURESQUE AS A COLOR book! I used to get a peep inside when I spent a week with her occasionally as a child. My interest in her jellies was never apparent when she passed them at the table as an accompaniment to one of her meals, but I always weakened when she decided to interrupt my play by calling time out for an afternoon snack. On those occasions she would lead me to the cupboard and inquire which of the many jars I would like to have her open. At first I chose only for the brightest colors, as I was too small to have any idea which would be the most delicious. Then one day she chanced to spread my bread with ground-cherry preserves and from that time on it was my favorite. These little yellow berries grew on vines close to the ground and were about the size of a cherry. The little round fruit was covered with a thin, lacy shell that would pop open when it was ripe.

Because of Great-grandpa's "sweet tooth" and the many foods with which he ate "spreading," Great-grandma had to make a lot of jelly and preserves. There were numerous ones among her favorites that we seldom see today. The quince tree, which was numbered among the trees in her back yard, bore a hard fruit with a fuzzy skin. When pared and ground, these made a most delicious quince honey. Watermelon preserves had an excellent flavor when they were fresh. The tiny little red cubes of melon had a tendency to become sugary, however.

There were also the clear, transparent pear preserves, with a close rival in the sour cherry preserves. The delicate pink rhubarb conserve was pretty, and so were the yellow tomato preserves. For jellies, clear, red crab apple and the deeper red currant were hard to beat.

There were all kinds of fruit butters too, some of which have had their day. Among these were pear, plum, grape and elderberry butter. Apple butter has always been a favorite. It is delicious when served with scrapple, fried mush or cottage cheese.

Many interesting stories are handed down from the "apple snitzing" days of long ago. The night before the apple butter was to be made some of the young folks from the neighborhood would come in to help pare apples. Between chatter, sweet cider, and pop corn, the required bushel and a half of apple snitz were soon prepared. The following evening Grandma watched the men lift the thirty-gallon kettle of butter from the fire. How happy she was if, when the last crock had been filled, there was enough left to send gifts to each of her neighbors!

Candies and Confections

Chapter XV

GREAT-GRANDMA WATCHED THAT OLD SUGAR BARREL IN THE PANTRY with misgivings. The canning season and jelly making of the summer months had drained heavily upon the family's supply. It was some months yet until Great-grandpa would be traveling to a distant city for his annual wagon load of supplies. Pies were a necessity for the happiness of the family during the week. And Sunday dare not come around without a cake, for fear unexpected company would arrive for dinner. The children liked candy too, but it was not a "have to be," for it was considered a luxury.

"Just wait a few more weeks, Susan," Grandpa would say. "That cane patch is about ready and that will help solve our problems." On a clear, crisp day in late autumn they made a fire under that big kettle and boiled sorghum molasses. With gallons of this molasses, the young folks could now have their candy in the form of a taffy pull. Many of their friends were invited in for the evening. While Grandma boiled the taffy they sang and played games. What fun they had pulling taffy, and what blisters!

I asked an older lady not long ago what kind of confections they made when she was a girl. She told me that they seldom had candy except at Christmas, and then they had only taffy and crackerjack.

There were a few hard candies made during those early days in case the sugar barrel did hold out. Vinegar candy was always good, especially when Grandma rolled it into little round balls while it was still warm. Then it had all the selling features of our lolly pops, except for the stick. Hard hoarhound candies were good if you liked their flavor. Grandpa and Grandma carried them in their pockets to church to pass around to the children, or to use in warding off a coughing spell.

The young folks of olden times no doubt had a number of "goodies" we do not know about today. We feel, however, that they missed a lot never to have tasted our creamy fudges, caramels and chocolates!

Chapter XVI

THAT OLD HANDWRITTEN BOOK OF GRANDMOTHER'S WAS MORE THAN A recipe book; it was a "doctor book" as well. On its back pages under the heading of "miscellany" were listed numerous remedies for many ills. Again the years have brought about many changes. Should Junior get a fish bone in his throat today, Mother would likely rush him to the doctor. But doctors were not so plentiful or so handy in Grandmother's time, and when called, it took one a long time to arrive in the horse-and-buggy days. So Grandmother resorted to those home remedies listed in the back of her book. The lodged fish bone in Benny's throat was simple enough to remove by her remedy; he merely had to swallow a raw egg!

Along with these remedies were many helpful suggestions to use on the farm or in the house. It was no doubt very helpful for Grandpa to "know how to get at the weight of cattle" in the absence of scales. An old book said, "If the animal girths five feet, it will weigh between 700 and 750 pounds." It must have helped Grandma, too, in dyeing rags for rugs, to know how many ounces of cochineal to add to oxalic acid, in order to make them red. Since we buy most of our dyes and medicines today, these old recipes hold little more than historical value.

It is difficult, however, to plan a cookbook without having a chapter for miscellaneous recipes. As in Grandma's book, so in the back of this one you will find some oft-used recipes that do not rightfully belong in any of the preceding chapters. Many of our farm families make homemade soap, using their collection of meat scraps and fats. Some families do not have access to lockers and still enjoy dried and canned corn. There are also folks who will appreciate knowing how to clean wallpaper and to make simple hand lotions. These recipes, along with others, are to be found in this chapter.

Place dried beans in a cloth bag and tie to rafters as Grandmother did or store in sealed cans.

Beans may also be dried without preliminary cooking.

Add 3 tablespoons of Ivory or Lux soap flakes.

Bring to boiling point and add silverware.

Cook for 10 minutes.

Remove from water and rinse in hot water.

Rub thoroughly with a soft, dry towel.

This is especially good for pieces of silver difficult to clean.

MRS. LYDIA HESS, Marion, Pa.

consistency of honey).
Pour into a granite or earthenware mold.
Let stand several hours, but cut before hard.
Put pieces of soap in a dry place to harden.

MRS. P. L. FREY, Archbold, Ohio; MRS. WALTER WEAVER, Christiana, Pa.

Food for a Barn Raising

This bit of information was found in a quaint, old handwritten recipe book from Great-grandmother's day. It is included here mainly for the purpose of giving us a peep into the past. As many of us know, a "barn raising" was quite an event during those early years. When a new barn was built, all the friends and neighbors came on the specified day to help put up the framework of the barn. This policy is still carried out in some communities where neighbors are neighborly. Homemakers of our day will no doubt be astounded at all the food consumed in one day. What is more difficult to believe is that it was all made in Great-grandmother's kitchen.

Here is the list as I found it:

115 lemon pies

500 fat cakes (doughnuts)

15 large cakes

3 gallons applesauce

3 gallons rice pudding

3 gallons cornstarch pudding

16 chickens

3 hams

50 pounds roast beef

300 light rolls

16 loaves bread

Red beet pickle and pickled eggs

Cucumber pickle

6 pounds dried prunes, stewed

1 large crock stewed raisins

5 gallon stone jar white potatoes and the same amount of sweet potatoes

Enough food for 175 men.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

For the Kitchen

Dry green celery or parsley leaves until crumbly. Store in covered jars to use as seasoning in soups and fillings.

After rice has been cooked and drained, place a slice of dry bread on top of the rice and cover. The bread will absorb the moisture and the rice will be dry and fluffy.

Before melting chocolate, rub the inside of the pan it is to be melted in with butter. The chocolate will not stick to the pan.

When washing pans and baking dishes to which food has adhered during cooking, turn the pan upside down in steaming, sudsy water. Food will loosen in a very short time.

When cookie dough is soft and difficult to handle, place it between pieces of waxed paper that have been floured. Roll to desired thickness, remove top paper and cut cookies.

To gel fruit juices that are difficult to gel, such as peach juice, add 1½ teaspoons plain gelatin to each cup of juice. Soften gelatin in 3 teaspoons juice and add to remaining hot juice. Add 1 teaspoon lemon juice to each quart of fruit juice.

Before discarding the empty catsup bottle, pour some vinegar into the bottle and use in making French dressing.

Pour melted paraffin on the cut end of cheeses or dried beef to keep them from molding or drying out.

To improve the flavor of green string beans, place 1 or 2 small onions in kettle before adding beans.

Singe chicken or other fowl by holding over burner of oil or gas stove.

When baking whole fish, wrap in well-oiled cheesecloth. When fish is done, it can be lifted from baking pan without falling to pieces. To remove cloth, slip a spatula under fish and slide cloth out after fish is on platter.

When pork or beef liver is tough, run it through a food chopper. Season and drop by spoonfuls into hot frying pan.

Wash fresh pineapples thoroughly before paring. Cover parings with water and cook until soft. Use strained juice for making jelly.

To keep muffins from burning around the edges, fill one section with water instead of batter.

Stick 2 or 3 pieces of macaroni in the center of the top of a double crust pie. The juice bubbles up these sticks and prevents pie from running over.

Do not beat egg whites for cakes or meringue until ready to use. If allowed to stand, some of the white will return to liquid.

To prevent onions from burning your eyes, hold them under water when peeling or slicing them.

Miscellaneous

To make yellowed piano keys white again, rub them with a cloth dipped in cologne water. Be careful not to touch the black keys.

Add 1 teaspoon of castor oil or 2 tablespoons of olive oil to the roots of your fern every 3 or 4 months to promote their growth.

To prevent clothes from sticking to line on a cold winter day, wipe the line with a cloth moistened with vinegar.

When making a rolled hem, put a row of machine stitching near edge to be rolled. This prevents stretching and aids in speeding up the job.

When watering house plants, use warm water rather than cold. The cold water shocks some plants to the extent that the roots are damaged and growth is retarded.

Do not wring out corduroy after laundering. Hang it up dripping wet, and it will be fluffy after it dries.

When wrapping a package for mailing, dip cord in water to moisten. The cord will shrink as it dries and will make a tighter package.

Do not discard empty pint-size ice cream containers. Clean them thoroughly and paint in bright colors and use them for house plants. These add a decorative note to your windows.

For dusting out corners and crevices, use a new soft paint brush. This is also good for dusting books and bric-a-brac.

Remove chewing gum from chair bottoms or table linens by massaging with an ice cube. Pick off hard gum in small pieces.

To keep scatter rugs from slipping on polished hardwood floors, place old rubber jar rings under each corner; fasten them with adhesive tape.

Place pieces of cloth moistened in camphor in your silverware drawer to help prevent tarnishing.

Remove white marks on your furniture by rubbing them with boiled linseed oil.

If your needle is rusty, push it into a piece of soap several times, and it will come out smooth.

When wooden knitting needles or crochet hooks get rough, paint them with clear nail polish.

Save the empty adhesive tape spool to wind your tape measure on. This will save trying moments caused by a jumbled sewing basket.

Apply a coat of paraffin to the bottom of your flowerpots to prevent them from scratching your table or other pieces of furniture.

To remove paraffin from the tops of jelly glasses, lay a piece of string across the top of glass just long enough to hang over edges and pour hot paraffin over it. When removing paraffin, lift by the ends of the string.

Another way to remove paraffin is to place the top of a milk bottle on the jelly. Leave the pull-up tab raised before pouring paraffin over it. When ready to use, pull by tab and the paraffin can be removed easily.

A cracked flower vase may be sealed so that it is water-tight to cold water by melting paraffin and filling up the cracks.

Remove stubborn sink stains by adding 3 tablespoons of liquid washing compound to 1 quart water. Pour on spots and let stand for several minutes.

To remove starch from an electric iron, heat it to "Rayon" and rub over sheets of waxed paper.

If your basement is dark, paint the bottom basement step with white paint. This will prevent accidents.

To remove a spot from the oven caused by a pie or casserole dish running over, first let the oven cool, then place a cloth on the spot and saturate it with household ammonia. Let soak 2 hours, then rinse.

To give new life and body to a rayon dress that has been laundered a number of times, add 1 teaspoon of plain gelatin to 1 quart of water in the last rinse.

Boiled rice water makes an excellent starch for dainty collars, cuffs and baby dresses.

A small brush with stiff bristles should be kept with your laundry equipment. Use this to brush shirt collars and other soiled pieces of clothing.

When drying chenille bedspreads, turn tufts inside. These will rub together while flapping in the breeze and will become soft and fluffy.

An interesting way to serve a meal to a convalescing child is to use a bright muffin pan. In a 6 compartment pan there is 1 place for a glass of milk, 4 places for food and another compartment for flowers.

THE STORY BEHIND

Mennonite Community Cookbook

MARY EMMA SHOWALTER GREW UP NEAR BROADWAY, Virginia, in a Mennonite farm family of nine children. She was tall, with a commanding presence. As the oldest daughter, she was not accustomed to being bossed around.

Author and compiler Mary Emma Showalter

When Mennonite Community Cookbook was about to be launched in 1950, the publicity manager at The C. Winston Company, the original publisher of the cookbook, called Mary Emma. in her Mennonite Weekly Review column on July 6, 1978, the author recalled how the publisher wanted to “flood hundreds of magazines, bookstores and book reviewers” with boxes filled of genuine homemade Mennonite cookies and decorated with the cover art from the cookbook.

“We need you to bake two thousand cookies from selected recipes in the cookbook,” the publicist said.

Mary Emma was in the middle of exam week as head of the fledging home economics department she had created at Eastern Mennonite College (now Eastern Mennonite University) in Harrisonburg, Virginia. “I can’t possibly do it!” Mary Emma recalled saying.

The answer came loud and clear: “This is a must; there is no alternative!”

Several of Mary Emma’s friends “came to the rescue, and on Saturday we turned the home economics kitchens into a bake shop. By day’s end, six cookies, two each of three different recipes, were packed into the little boxes the publishers had sent. They were slipped into an outer box with address labels and mailed."

Becoming the author of the first best-selling Mennonite cookbook was only one of Mary Emma's many accomplishments. As a Mennonite conscientious objector during World War II, she began working as a dietitian in 1942 for Civilian Public Service (CPS), a government program for conscientious objectors who worked in mental hospitals, starvation projects, road construction, forest fighting units, and more. While assigned to a CPS camp in Grottoes, Virginia, Mary Emma worked in the kitchen and began teaching the men to cook. The classes were so popular she developed a three-month training program and manual, and was asked to visit fifteen CPS camps across the United States to do similar training.

Mary Emma Showalter, center, cooking with fellow CPS workers at Grottoes, Virginia, camp.

In her travels, Mary Emma noted similarities and differences in Mennonite foods and cooking in various communities—the seed for her idea to compile Mennonite Community Cookbook.

In 1944 she was sent abroad by Mennonite Central Committee on an American troop ship with three thousand soldiers. Stationed in the Sinai desert, she worked as a dietitian in a refugee camp, feeding 1,075 children and teaching their mothers.

When she returned from the war and relief efforts in 1946 and began postgraduate studies, she worked on the cookbook off and on for three years. It became part of her master's research at the University of Tennessee, documenting food history among Mennonite communities. She finished her master's in 1948, and by the time the cookbook was slated to come out in June of 1950, she was a professor at Eastern Mennonite College and head of the home economics department. Later she would complete a doctorate at Pennsylvania State University (1957) and become the first female professor at Eastern Mennonite College with a doctorate.

After the book came out in 1950, sales quickly soared. At least one college student paid for an entire year of school by selling the book door-to-door. The book immediately went back to print for a second printing in July 1950. People across the Mennonite church were excited, along with the publisher.

Then a tinge of criticism appeared in the Mennonite Quarterly Review, citing a discrepancy regarding the number of recipes in the book. While the book's introduction said there were 1,400 recipes, the reviewer had only counted 1,200.

When Mary Emma got word of the review, she "could scarcely wait until my last class of the day was over so I could again count the recipes in the book," she wrote later in a letter to the publisher. To her absolute dismay, the critique was correct; her former count was wrong. The publisher hadn't discovered the error either. Mary Emma chalked up the discrepancy to two things: she had counted the recipes by chapters and then made an arithmetic mistake of 100 as she totaled the column; the publisher had also "weeded out some recipes" with Mary Emma's consent, but "neither of us thought to change the total given in the introduction."

Mary Emma reflected, "I accept this as rebuke in answer to my continuous prayer that [God would] send what it takes to keep me humble." She concluded her letter by saying she didn't think the actual quantity of recipes was important to the initial robust sales of the book. In recent years, the recipe count actually numbers 1,115.

Mennonite Community Cookbook was originally published through the auspices of an interested ad hoc group called Mennonite Community Association in Scottdale, Pennsylvania. Mary Emma had also contacted the official church book publisher, herald Press (also located in Scottdale), a department of the larger Mennonite Publishing house. Herald Press originally indicated it wasn't interested in publishing the book because "we don't publish cookbooks." So The John C. Winston Company (which later merged to form Holt, Rinehart and Winston) was the actual initial publisher, with Mennonite Publishing house signing on as a key distributor: In 1970 Herald Press asked to purchase rights to continue publishing the cookbook. Mary Emma enjoyed many years of ongoing royalties before she died in 2003. her estate now donates all the royalties from the book to Eastern Mennonite University.

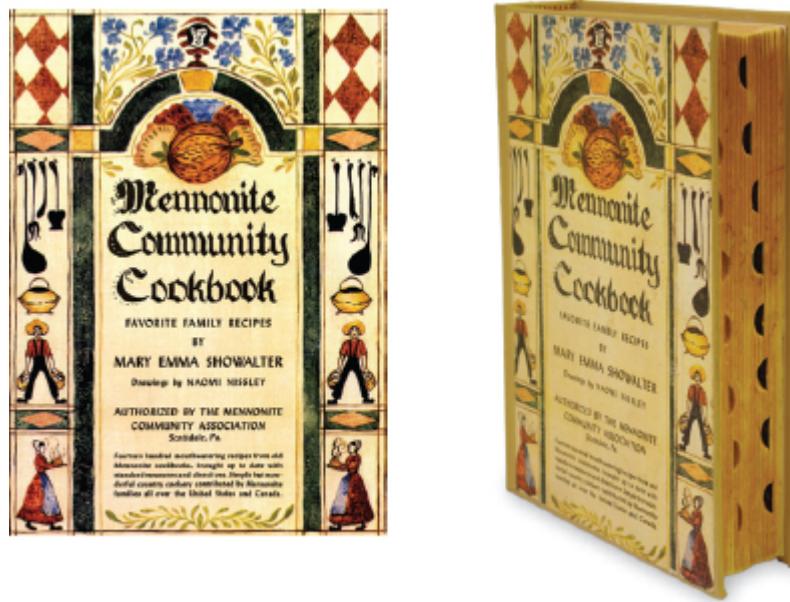

The original publisher projected that the book would sell well for maybe five to seven years. No one imagined that the book would still be in print sixty-five years later and nearing half a million copies in print.

HISTORY OF COVERS

In the sixty-five years of Mennonite Community Cookbook, there have only been five different covers, all of them slight variations on the iconic cover with classic Pennsylvania Dutch Fraktur. The original Fraktur artwork, drawn by Naomi Nissley, disintegrated to the point that it became unusable many years ago. In recent years the book has been printed using a scan of the original cover art.

Original Hardcover with Dust Jacket (June 1950)

The original cover of the book is pictured here. It was available in a deluxe version with chapter index indents on the side for $4.50, or without indents for $3.50.

Pie Cover (December 1950)

A short-lived hardcover edition of the book featured a photo of “assorted pies from Grandmother’s kitchen” on top of the Fraktur cover. The photo was taken by M. T. Brackbill, a physics professor at Eastern Mennonite College who took all of the original food photos for the book. There does not appear to be more than one printing of the book with this cover.

Mass Market Size (1972)

A sampler collection of just 127 pages was printed by Herald Press in 1972. This small book sold 250,000 copies by 1998.

Paperback with Comb Binding (1992)

Herald Press trimmed the book down to  $5\frac{3}{8}'' \times 8\frac{1}{2}''$  (13.6 × 21.5 cm) in 1992 to release the title as a paperback with comb binding. At first, Mary Emma was dismayed when she heard about this edition because she felt it ruined the look and feel of the book. She was won over, however, when she learned that readers were happy the cookbook was now easier to use because it opened and laid flat on a counter. Unfortunately, because of resizing the pages, some of the cover art was squeezed off the edges.

Both the hardcover and paperback with comb binding editions were printed simultaneously for a year, but the hardcover version was not printed again after 1993.

Random House Edition (1999)

The editors and management of Herald Press negotiated with Random House to create a special hardcover edition in 1999 with the title Pennsylvania Dutch Cooking: A Mennonite Community Cookbook. Except for the title and cover, the book is exactly the same inside.

65th Anniversary Edition (2015)

This 2015 edition uses a scan of an early dust jacket that was modified to restore the full artwork on the cover. New color photos have been added throughout the book to illustrate the recipes and attract new generations of readers and cooks. With the exception of this new historical section, everything else in the book—all of the recipes and Mary Emma's fascinating chapter introductions—remains the same.

THE AUTHOR AND THE ARTIST

Mary Emma Showalter and Naomi Nissley

One part of the book publishing process frightened Mary Emma greatly, she confessed in her newspaper column. The John C. Winston Company was based in Philadelphia and had planned a gala book launch at Wannamaker's, the biggest downtown department store in the city. "I did my best to get out of it," she wrote, "but to no avail." So she was very glad that her artistic colleague, Naomi Nissley, accompanied her. On the streets of Philadelphia, a huge poster with both their photos greeted passersby outside the store.

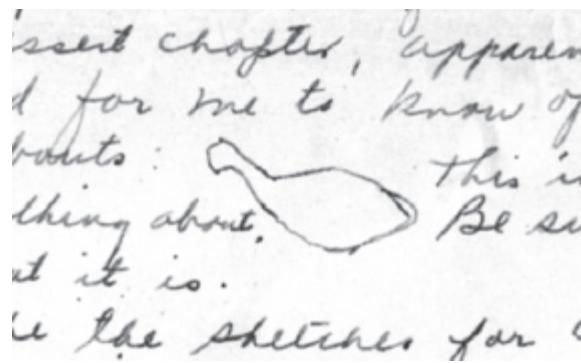

From childhood, Mennonite-born Naomi Nissley dreamed of becoming an artist. Mary Emma and Naomi likely first became acquainted when Naomi attended Eastern Mennonite College for a few years, according to Naomi's brother, Lowell Nissley. Naomi went on to complete her degree at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia in 1950, and later received her master of fine arts from the Tyler School of Art at Temple University. Permanent collections of her work are found today in the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Yale University, Rutgers University, and elsewhere. Some of Naomi's original sketches for Mennonite Community Cookbook are in the archives at Eastern Mennonite University.

Lowell recalls that Naomi was offered her choice of a lump payment for the artwork or royalties over the years. "She took the lump payment," he said, noting it was an "understandable mistake" for a graduate student still funding her art studies.

The artist and the author collaborated mostly by mail. Naomi died in 2010, but her husband of fifty-five years, Alexander "Sandy" Limont, shared a copy of a long, handwritten letter from Mary Emma to Naomi detailing the author's suggestions for modifying some of the drawings. In the letter, it is obvious that the two delicately negotiated the balance between artistic license for Naomi and remaining true to Mary Emma's vision as the author.

Mary Emma wrote politely but forthrightly: "The sketches arrived yesterday in perfect condition. I surely was thrilled to get some more of them. I liked them as a whole very much but would have a few suggestions on several. I like the butter mold very much and know that I described it in the chapter on desserts but am wondering if it would not be more appropriate in the chapter on jams." The butter mold sketch never made it to the book, but molded butter is represented in the Grandmother's Table photo. (In this edition, the photo appears in this section on page 506.)

Later in the letter, Mary Emma writes of one sketch, "I am not acquainted with the object you sketched for the end of the dessert chapter, apparently it is too old for me to know of its whereabouts. Be sure to tell me what it is." In the cookbook, there is an old water pump at the end of the dessert chapter, so it appears the artist's idea was dropped. Mary Emma also noted, “The old cheese bag is perfect and I would like that at the opening of the chapter Chapter V, [page 110]. In the meantime, I have changed the theme of Chapter IV to ‘Poultry and Fish’ so that the sketch of the fish could perhaps be made a bit smaller and then used at the end of that chapter.” The sketch of the fish is still there, on page 109!

This kind of detailed description—all handwritten—speaks to Mary Emma’s penchant, as testified to by her students, for graceful excellence, patience, precision, and order. The author and artist worked at how to illustrate the book throughout 1949. Mary Emma’s letter to Naomi bears a date of August 2, 1949, with the final artwork due in December 1949; the book was first published the following June.

The efforts of artist and author paid off, not only in a beautiful and historical book that has sold winsomely for sixty-five years, but also in artistic laurels right out of the gate. In 1951, the book received recognition at the Philadelphia book Show at Franklin Institute as an outstanding book for its design and manufacture, and a congratulatory letter from the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts complimented Naomi’s “excellent drawings.”

Both women were devoted to their work and married later than many of their peers. Naomi wed Alexander in 1955 at age thirty, and Mary Emma married widower Ira E. Eby in 1960 at age forty-seven, after being introduced by family members. Both women retained their professional names on all editions of the cookbook, which was not as common then as it is now.

PUBLISHING AND PROMOTION HISTORY

In addition to boxing and mailing hundreds of cookies to magazines, bookstores, and reviewers, the publisher also orchestrated additional promotions during the first book tour. At an autographing party at Wannamaker's department store in Philadelphia, some of the cookies baked by Mary Emma and her cohorts were distributed to the first two hundred who came to see the cookbook.

The first book tour continued into the nearby city of Lancaster. Because of its large Mennonite population, the publisher scheduled Mary Emma for a television appearance—without consulting her.

“I was horrified,” wrote Mary Emma in her Mennonite Weekly Review column (July 20, 1978). At that time, television was pretty much a taboo in Virginia Mennonite Conference (the regional church body to which Mary Emma belonged). Prior to the appearance, Mary Emma was informed that someone would come to the station and apply her makeup.

“But I don’t wear makeup!” Mary Emma protested.

“You will look like a ghost without it,” replied the publicist.

“I can’t do it,” she finally said.

The woman asked if it was a matter of conscience and, when Mary Emma assured her that it was, the matter was dropped—although she was reminded that hundreds of viewers “would be disappointed.”

“It was the only time I was able to talk my way out of anything [the publicity manager] suggested,” recalled Mary Emma in her column. “I am amused today at my concern, but as we all know, time has its way of changing things.”

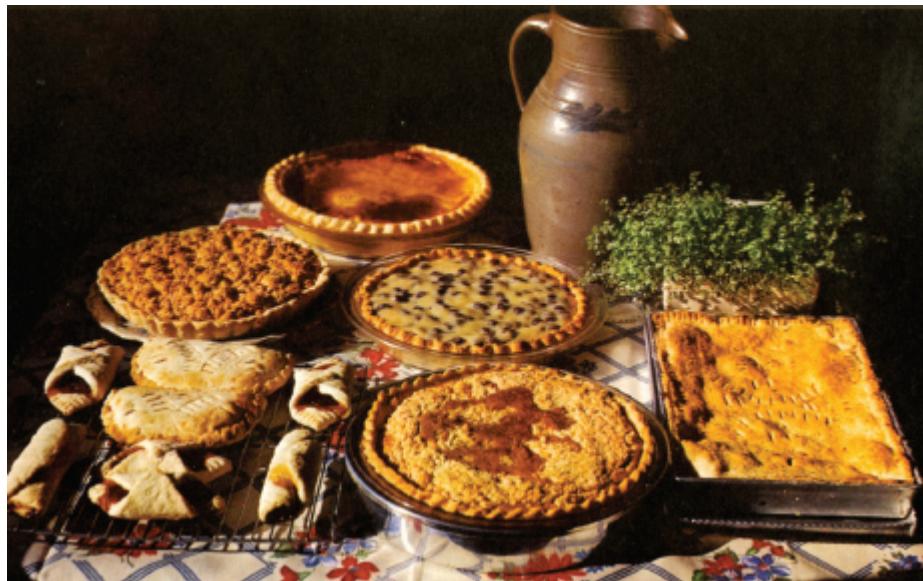

The book was featured in a 1962 two-page photo spread in Life magazine (circled below) commenting on the plethora of cookbooks available at that time (850), which was increasing by about one hundred new cookbooks published per year.

ARCHIVAL PHOTOS OF FOODS

The original food photography in the book was done by M. T. Brackbill, an Eastern Mennonite College physics professor and avid photography buff. He staged and organized the food very carefully, preferring dark backgrounds in order to focus on the foods. Mary Emma and family members cooked and plated the food selections in the home where she was then living, using many treasured serving dishes, china, tablecloths, and decorative ware from her family. Some of Mary Emma's favorite recipes in the cookbook include Baked Corn, Baked Ham (slices, not whole), Baked Salsify, Fried Chicken, Shoo Fly Pie, Cooked Salad Dressing (on watercress or dandelion), Cole Slaw, all fruit pies, and Baked Stuffed Fish (shad). She also very much enjoyed making her own pickles each summer, according to family members.

ASSORTED PIES FROM GRANDMOTHER'S KITCHEN! Who does not still enjoy the flavor of Grandmother's crumb pies, including Shoo Fly Pie, Sour Cream Raisin Pie, Baked Custard, Turnovers, Pig in the Blanket, or Snitz Pie?

AN AFTERNOON SNACK! What recalls the olden days better than a loaf of homemade bread with a fancy mold of butter and a dish of red currant jelly?

FAVORITES OF THE PENNSYLVANIA DUTCHMAN! Three old favorites—Stuffed Pig Stomach, or Dutch Goose; Scrapple; and Pickled Pigs' Feet, or Souse.

CAKES FROM GRANDMOTHER'S DAY! Two of the cakes that often graced Grandmother's table were the rich, golden pound cake and the coconut cake. At Christmas time she served fruit cake much as we do today.

OLD-FASHIONED GINGER COOKIES! Among Grandmother's favorite cookies were these large, chewy ones glazed with beaten egg.

The fluted cups without handles were bought by the author's great-grandmother 125 years ago.

CORN SOUP WITH RIVELS! This soup was thickened with tiny rivels and garnished with buttered bread crumbs. The soup tureen dates from early days.

BIG DUMPLINGS AND LITTLE DUMPLINGS! The Dutchman doesn't mind which you serve, Snit and Knepp or Dampknepp as main dishes, or Cherry Knepllies or Apple Dumplings as dessert.

GRANDMOTHER'S TABLE! That table of Grandmother's was a real piece of art. There was no floral centerpiece, but there were decorative notes in the fancy molds of butter and jelly, and in the cut glass spoon holder and cream and sugar set. All foods were placed on the table before the meal was announced.
